Overview

DEFINING THE ROLE OF A TEACHING ARTIST

CREATING A POSITIVE CLASSROOM ENVIRONMENT

CULTIVATING A CULTURALLY RESPONSIVE TEACHING PRACTICE

Teaching Artist Institute (TAI) is a three-day training intended to prepare professional artists to teach their artform in a classroom setting and deliver high quality arts education. At the end of the institute, participating artists will be invited to teach a five-day arts residency with the Young Audiences of Louisiana afterschool program. Artists who complete the training and residency will be invited to continue training and explore further career opportunities. Each teaching artist who completes TAI will receive a stipend of $200. Artists will receive an additional stipend of $300 after they complete their afterschool residency.

New Orleans artists are the backbone of New Orleans culture and play an important role in preserving and progressing the artistic legacy of this city. In recognition of the fact that the arts rely on the people who create and preserve it, Young Audiences is committed to educational equity, culturally responsive teaching, and anti-racist work in serving the students and educators of New Orleans. The Teaching Artist Institute training and residency centers on undoing racism and honoring the culture and lived experiences of students and educators whom we serve.
